Washington, December 14, 1884. To the Editor of THE HERALD:

It has been said that in Oregon, if they have a rain such as a resident of the Rocky Wountains would call a new synonymous, an erasure is unnecessary—of Washington "snorty" it is called an "Oregon mist;" and that, before they call it rain, the and that gater comes down in sheets; and that so sit down in that delightfully sylvan The rigging has been resumed for the Washington shaft, and it looks as nice and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking and as clean as though it might have been dressed down by the precisely like taking the precisely like taking the precisely like taking the precisely like taking the precise of the p one rease on a well-developed sponge. So wet. It may not be as relevant as could be desired, but the fact is the above was suggested by the pluvial down-pour which is now putting a wetdown-pour which is now putting a wet-blanket over Washington and suburbs. When it rains here, "it do rain, my word" for it. The natural revivifying process is a frequent occurrence. There has been little, if any, snow, and the days eften remind me more of "quiet spring" than of the hoar-crowned monarch of one season of the year. One would think there was a manifest disposition on the part of Congress to do charley Popper's pretty form was visible on the street during the week. He and his family are in New York, where they will spend this winter. He has a other bill before the House on the private calendar, regarding the ownership of his slaughter house and property at the mouth of Dry Canyon, just northeast of Salt Lake. General McCook attempted to raze the place on the ground that it was on the military reservation, the was on the inflitary reservation, the details of which your readers are doubt-less familiar with. Mr. Popper did not see it in that light, and having clearly a right to the place, bolted to Congress and had a bill introduced. It has passed the Senate and has received the favorable consideration of the House committee, and was to have been acted upon on Friday private bill deal and the second on Friday, private bill day, but the day was occupied by the wrangle above re-lerred to. There is no doubt that it will at Dwyer's. be passed when it comes before the House, and that event transpiring, Mr. Popper, who recollects some reflections alleged to have been made by General McGool, on him (Popper), proposes to have the commandant at Fort Douglas, do a little genteel explaining. P. T. VanZile, the Moses of campaign poetry fame, and well remembered District Attorney for Utah, is in Washington. He represents a Michigan railton. He represents a Michigan railroad, but sights for the rugged hills of the Rockies, and would fain meander along the pebbled and pur ing brooks of Salt Lake. Despite those awful and blood-thirsty Moraous, he prefers their savage and barbarous association to the benigh and civilizing influences of his own Ohio, and the large manufacturing State of Michigan. The Judge—VanZile—commenting on the open railing would not hold water; that he had investigated the subject and knew had investigated the subject and knew it could not stand. It must be gratify-ing to a man of Mr. Dixon's legal attaining to a man of Mr. Dixon's legal attainments to realize that he can convict men only because he has the ears of a judge who will rule anyway to bag a Mornton. It has defeat at its tail; and the word tail is very suggestive in this connection. Judge Jacob S. Boreman also has done the capital the honor to visit it. The object of the visit is unknown but the presumption is that he sighs for amother Judgeship, probably not in Utah; though it is hinted he would not suffer from rheumatism of the conscience if he was tendered the place he formerly ocwas tendered the place he formerly oc-cupied, and which "My best guess"

Everything betokens the approach of Christmas and the retail streets are daily crowded with ladies elegantly attired-that is, where the rain permits. If Washington women are not the prettiest in the world, the e is a universal plumpness about them—perhaps I should say they are universally plump, as there is danger of serious and indelicate ambiguity in the other phrase—which compensates for gazing at cadaverous maidens of other climes for any length of time.
